The banks reported a very dull day, and The banks reported a very dull day, and seither they not the Heaten Chines at the corner had a word of news to impart. Exchange remains at revious figures. In St. Louis we notice there was the advance; the Bepublican of Thursday, said: "An divance came, as was expected with the first marked eturn of confidence in the speedy restoration of lass to the money market. Transactions in New York exchange between banks were large pesterday, and the rates paid showed a very wide range, round ots selling at par, 50c and $1 premium. The market strongthened visibly during the day, and it was not possible late in the afternoon to buy under 50c oremium." The New York Post observes: "It hould be remembered that, now that the whole curency of the country is at par with gold, if the rates or loans here rule for any time above those in fordign markets, gold will be attracted here, and when a strives it will at once become a part of the curency, or the money that runs, instead of being simply bankable commodity as before specie payments. bankable commodity as before specie payments, as you have you has, therefore, markets to draw upon in se of a stringency that were before actically closed to it.
